SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Adjutant General's papers deal with the State of Tennessee's Military programs beginning in 1796. Although the bulk of the records concern the Civil War, they contain some information on the state militia. The oldest document is a regimental return of the militia stationed at Fort Grainger, Southwest Point and Tellico (25-17). Of particular interest is correspondence dealing with Tennessee's role in the Indian wars of 1836 and efforts to raise regiments in defense of the western frontiers in the Arkansas and Louisiana territories during the Texan war of independence from Mexico.

Records of the Civil War period have been supplemented by some correspondence of regular United States forces stationed within the State. Records involving civilian affairs during the final years of the Civil War and the first years of the subsequent peace have been incorporated under the heading of the Board of Trade and Personnel. A most fascinating record of the activities of Federal Army activities can be found in incoming telegraphs to the office of Adjutant General Alvan C. Gillem, U.S.A. (13-18).

Financial, individual, and regimental affairs are documented by routine records. Correspondence for years other than those surrounding the Civil War is scanty by shed some light on the duties of the Adjutant General.

Volumes of oversized material are numbered consecutively within each series and follow the boxes containing records of that series.
